

Edyta Górniak, Hold On Your Heart

What's another waiting day
You can smile and find a way
To decide that she forgot to call
'Cause you know she's high flying now
And you know that time disallows

How to paint it I don't know
Color in "I love you so"
Get the wind to whisper on the breeze
And to say that I'll still be here

Even though I can't dry your tears
Guess I'll wait for time to mend
When you figured what she's trying to say

So maybe get a hold on your heart
You'd better hold on your heart
'Cause you're about to know how it feels
To be broken apart

Will it all be history
Will there be a time for me
Left to face the shadows on the wall
Telling me the sun is going down
And you know that leaves are turning brown
But I guess I'll still be here
When she's found the time to call it a day

So maybe get a hold on your heart
You'd better hold on your heart
Because you see I know how it feels
To be broken apart

Like a bird without a song
I was playing a part
But I was hoping all alone
You would see where to stay

And hold on your heart
You'd better hold on your heart
'Cause you're about to know how it feels
To be broken apart

Hold on
You'd better hold on your heart
Because you see I know how it feels
To be broken apart
