Embracing, Name It Tomorrow

The first daylight stroke me I lost the word I was about to say And left in my hand was only a leaf I think I'll name it Tomorrow Beautiful field of serenade They play my song on their violins Golden gems reaching for me Never fall for the shiny temptation Hear the echoing screams calling Drown in a lake Deep down to the bottom of my sorrows A meeting in silence The lost girl and I We circled into the unknown Greet the homecoming Wave them inside the hall Sit down, hail with us Guess the king is proud of me Giant cubes upon my shore Torn down by oceans tide We sit there all alone in the blue Spill venus blood A darkred stream down her spine I think I'll name it Tomorrow I will name it Tomorrow, name it Tomorrow Itching in her open eye I must give a helping hand Taste my fingers and my words And I will give you more than so A dream with a white sea I think I'll name it Tomorrow I will name it Tomorrow, name it Tomorrow
