

Everyday Sunday, Freshman Year

Once again the sunrise ends your day
I can't come over
All you want is silence anyway
But your tears are beautiful
The couch is stained from your make-up
I wonder when you wake up
If you'll remember
All that lies

You say that this is freedom
And maybe this ain't real
You say you're tired of chasing the stars
But here's a new beginning
It's your freshman year
And you don't even know who you are

You fell in love on the freeway where the music leads your feet but you turned the other way down another street so playing games when we were young you pretend there's nothing wrong
And I guess I'll pretend I'm blind

You say that this is freedom
And maybe this ain't real
You say you're tired of chasing the stars
But here's a new beginning
It's your freshman year

Freshman year

In the mirror I see your face Together we can leave this place
Mercy set us free tonight

You say that this is freedom
And maybe this ain't real
You say you're tired of chasing the stars
But here's a new beginning
It's your freshman year
And you don't even know who you are

I give myself life
You give yourself life
We give ourselves away
