

Expatriate, In The Night

Time ticks, ticks away
Over bright lights and machines we've made
A beautiful face in a bar
Is one raindrop in a million others
You'll never know of the night sky
The way I have for all of time
It sings to me a lullaby
The day can't bring even though it tries

It hurts a little, it cuts a little
It takes you right down to the bone
I see the love
I see it in all of you

In the night, I can breathe again
On this night, I found my one and only friend
This feeling inside counts for more than anything
In the night I can breathe again

I was downtown all alone at three
I kept on crawling cause I had to flee
Hunters and fighters, lovers and thieves
We all moved together under one belief
I sat down and watched the bullets fly
Across my heart on the loneliest night
I went to the end of the earth
Just to find out where it really hurts

It hurts a little, it cuts a little
It takes you right down to the bone
I see the love
I see it in all of you

In the night, I can breathe again
On this night, I found my one and only friend
This feeling inside counts for more than anything
In the night I can breathe again

Don't tell anyone, cause I trust you
Don't tell anyone, cause I trust you
Don't tell anyone, cause I trust you
Cause I trust you

In the night, I can breathe again
On this night, I found my one and only friend
This feeling inside counts for more than anything
In the night I can breathe again
