

Failure, Another Space Song

the solar panel's shining face is smiling back on me twisting off into the sun it's okay to be lonely

all my missions float away i never trained too hard i'm so caught up in the tree of stars falling in my backyard

she'll always be what i can't find she'll always be where i break down she'll always hide behind a star i'll always dream she can't be far i've got no Houston to whine down to i've got no protocol gravity's so far away wrapped on that shrinking ball i eclipsed my memories sleeping inside this pod patient time will carry me on her back without a sigh and i won't let her down my soul is celestial-bound and if i'm never found she'll always be

i'll always dream she can't be far
