Fair Haven, Kings of Empty Castle

What is this rage inside? These eyes are bilnd This mouth is dry What is this weight I carry around? Are these stepts not far? What will it take to touch the ground? What is this vouy the yearns to heal? In the corner, in the dark A lonely refuge for the armour What is this that I am Am I not free to be within me the lion and the lamb? Is that what I feel realy real? A drean denied or statisfied. I feel what I feel I am that I am Kings of empty castels, Beneath a crimson cry Livinig in a garden with the wind, the rain, the cry Escaping from the tyranny, no fear, no need to hide Abandoing defenses, Into the world we ride No longer does this rage abide Wision shining from these eyes No longe do l feel a wight My steps now sure upon the ground No longer is this uncleaer In the light I stand to dace No longer do I wonder why Within me the lion and the lamb
