

Fair Haven, When I Turned To Steel

Smoke lies on the horizon Storm clouds fill the air Mountains in the distance
I sense something there
My words no longer serve me
Just voices in my head Confused, I turn away
An icy calm becomes me

I close my book of dread

A long awaited silence falls around instead

All that I ever wanted was to know what time it was when the moon came out when the tides had changed when I turned to steel

Nobody ever showed me how to open up my heart all that I ever saw were lies

Now that I'm in the middle of a changing of the guard all I see inside is a disguise