

Falconer, Child Of The Wild

Gaze into nature's eyes
Is there spite, is there greed?
Face your fellow man
Realize he's of evil breed
We ought to be afraid of ourselves

You must not live in fear
For the child of the wild
Look around, do you see
The beast in you and me?

Take a step into the wild
Horrific creatures will hide
You're the terror well disguised
You're the fear that locks itself inside
We ought to be afraid of ourselves

Embrace the untamed
See the grandeur under the grime
Feel a rising peace
By a wind from deep seas

Surrounded by a big crowd:
You feel secure in the night
Black waters and dark woods:
And you tremble by fright
We ought to be afraid of ourselves
