Five O'Clock Heroes, Run To Her

I know my place I watch TV and it's in my face I'd buy a gun But now, who do you shoot when no side can be won? Who can I tell? I know your daughter oh so well Where is the trust? I think my girl sleeps with more than one I sit in the backseat never Tell me what is your car When you're old and you think you're clever And life tells you're something you're not? Run to her I run to her, run to her I run to her, run to her Across the sky Trace of fire lights my bloodshot eyes A subtle speech Into the crowd and to all the streets It's hard to hear A lack of sleep and the cracks appear It's hard to tell who wants you dead and who wants you hurt I sit in the backseat never Tell me what is your car When you're old and you tihnk you're clever and life tells you're something you're not Run to her I run to her, run to her I run to her But every night I sit alone Is one more time when she should be with me And what it is is something I don't know but I know what I want to be Run to her I run to her, run to her I run to her, run to her Oh oh oh, oh-oh Oh oh oh, oh-oh Oh oh oh, oh-oh Oh oh oh, oh-oh