

Fool's Garden, Tocsin

(Hinkel / Freudenthaler)

You saw her standing at the gateway with her hands in the clouds But the higher she is moving the more it gets you down And she's waiting in the afterglow
With her eyes somewhere else It's like she says:
"Don't let it worry you";

Was it just a warning
Someday you might awake
Maybe all inside of you is not enough for what you take
Was it just a warning
Someday you might awake
And maybe all inside of you,
maybe you'll fail

Somewhere out where you are standing still and shovel dust in the wind Someone told you'd better wait until the rain will begin Maybe it's time for reflections and the night endless long gives you chance enough to make believe it's going on

Was it just a warning
Someday you might awake
Maybe all inside of you
is not enough for what you take
Was it just a warning
Someday you might awake
And maybe all inside of you,
maybe you'll fail