Foreigner, Heart Turns To Stone

The days and nights you sit around wondering where can she be Hoping that she might appear, out of nowhere But you fail to see

All the hurt inside, the wounded pride Ooh what she went through for you You cheated and lied, as her love slowly died And her heart just broke in two

When she was with you, all along Behind you right or wrong She tried to hold on, hold on But you went too far, and she's gone

And now it's over and her heart turns to stone No time for pity, when her heart turns to stone She cries a little as her heart turns to stone She's that kind of woman She'll do fine on her own

What you thought was a game A game you were winning Wouldn't go your way Now you've lost what you had And your back to the beginning It's the price you have to pay

When she was with you, all along Behind you right or wrong She tried to hold on, hold on But you went too far, and she's gone

And now it's over and her heart turns to stone No time for pity, when her heart turns to stone She cries a little as her heart turns to stone She's that kind of woman She'll get by on her own

She hides the pain But her heart turns to stone No time for pity When her heart turns to stone She cries sometimes As her heart turns to stone She's that kind of woman She'll get by on her own

Yeah it's over And her heart turns to stone Don't look for pity now When her heart turns to stone Listen to her cry Listen to her cry She's a woman now Ooh it's a sad thing to see To see a heart turn to stone The heart of a woman A heart turned to stone
