Frank's Enemy, Serenity

No mother ever loved her child like mine And what I realize now makes for a difficult time We try our best with good intents but it's trial and error Now we're left digging into ourselves for our terrors

I was not the most picked on kid But I sure hate a lot of people for a lot of things they did Sometimes I think I'm still controlling the damage That could drive me into realms of thought so savage

Serenity I must decide on my serenity

Some I love have now died I won't regain those moments replace the times I didn't try To be to them what I feel I should have been Sometimes dreams just turn out to be dreams

And some things that were done to me I know I turned around and I did to someone else Who might now be hating or forgiving me I have a Lord to follow I begin by forgiving myself
