

Frank Sinatra, There I Go

(musical intro)

There I go, leading with my heart again

And there I go, acting not so smart again

But though it's unwise, I can't disguise my love.

Though I know too much love may curb the fire

There I go, led astray by my desire

There's no golden rule to guide a fool in love.

I tell my heart, "Be careful, or you'll find that you dream alone."

I'm wise it's true, what good does it do?

My heart has a mind of its own.

There I go, spilling all the dreams I knew

And there I go thrillingly in love with you.

Don't know if you care, darling, but there I go.
