Inside of the continually falling rain
Hollowly, I looked up into the sky
With the ends stretching out into eternity
A flock of birds looking for freedom was crying out

Only your lost smiling face
Could never do anything like betray
Over and over I murmured this to my heart

And no matter how much I've been hurt
And what became the thing that hurts me
I can't stop for anyone

It's fine if I only find a little bit of light
Even if today's sun doesn't rise
"The falling rain will someday cease, won't it..."

You've gotten tired of walking
In your hand you've held the vanishing dream

And when this life has been exhausted
There's something precious that cannot be forgotten
Our time together that we fought for

And even when my voice doesn't reach you
Even when we can't return to that time again
I'm here, continuing to cry out to you

Even when those times stream by
Like the feelings that make my body shake...
Because the evidence of our continued fighting remains

Someone continues to search for
The meaning of their birth

And no matter how much I've been hurt
And what became the thing that hurts me
I can't stop for anyone

It's fine if I only find a little bit of light
Even if today's sun doesn't rise
"The falling rain will someday cease, won't it..."

"That's right, this rain will someday cease, won't it..."
