

Galadriel, Lavondyss

The fire burns in the land of the bird's spirit
The smoke flows of my bones, I have to go there...

That childish hand discovered the masks in the wood
Those bright eyes saw hooded figures, smashed
- they streaked in shadows

There places whispered their names
And the summer breeze smelled with a winter

Strong timbers absorbed her words
And the answer was just a flutter
Of winged beings up in the limbs
Tallis - the sweetheart of the cripple

Her warrior under "The strong against the storm"
Stone talismans scared away all birds
The Nature's laws, the love, the death and the knowing
Mysterious beings, warriors in furs and bones of prophecy

Endless search for the lost, lost brother Harry Long wandering to the place
Place where the life ends and the lost could be found
Could be found Lavondyss

Lonely in death, the circle - Lavondyss
