

Gary Moore, House Full Of Blues

(Gary Moore)

I would have done anything, to make you mine
Sold everything, to buy you a ring, stop drinking the wine
But I was a fool to play by your rules
But everyone said, your better off dead, you'll get yourself hurt

But you left me
Yes you left me
Living in a House full of blues
Cause you left me
Yes you left me
Living in a House full of blues

I kidded myself, that nobody else
Would take you away but until that day, till you turned away
And I was a fool, to play by your rules
Everyone said, your better off dead, you'll get yourself hurt

And you left me
Yeah I left you
Yeah you left me
Yeah I left you
Living in a House full of blues

You left me
Yeah I left you
That's where you left me
That's where I left you
Living in a House full of blues

All over the world there's all kinds of people
Some run underground, some climbing the steeple
And counting the cost of all that they lost, and paying the price
There paying for the laughs they had in the past now there all gone

I would have done anything, to make you mine
Sold everything, to buy you a ring, stop drinking the wine
But I was a fool to play by your rules
Took all that I had, turned everything bad and now that it's gone

Cause you left me
Yeah I left you
Yes you left me
Oh I left you
Living in a House full of blues
Yes you left me
Yeah I left you
Oh lord you left me
Oh lord I left you
Living in a House full of blues

Yeah I left you
In a House Full of Blues
In a House Full of Blues
