George, Run

A weapon of fire, emotions mistrust And they're still lying, they won't be to pushed Call me to freedom, too much to bear Take me to reason, and I'll fly from there

But if you run, and hide, you'll lose my soul When it's time to cross the tide, I'll be lost in the flow when the truth won't happen please don't try to run

If life was a season, the leaves turned to grey Call in a freebird, who may light the way These words were spoken, to tempt you from fire A hope for emotion, which came to desire

But if you run, and hide, you'll lose my soul When it's time to cross the tide, I'll be lost in the flow when the truth won't happen Please don't try to run

Or the world we're shaping Will fall from the sky I'll take your happy fall And linger as time goes on

Solitary motion, will lead to despair Fortunes in bleeding, will bring souls to bear But if it's hoping, I'm hoping too much It's not the solution, to live on mistrust

But if you run, and hide, you'll lose my soul When it's time to cross the tide, I'll be lost in the flow When the truth won't happen Please don't try to runWhen you're lost please don't try to run Please don't try to run....
