

Great Lake Swimmers, Imaginary Bars

When the sun fell down and fell asleep drunk from drinking all the heat it made a splash onto the sky
the stars stayed up 'til morning

i was in a prison with imaginary bars i was riding shotgun in imaginary cars one was filled with wind twisting through an iron mouth one was made of trees with no keys to shimmy out

oooooh...
