

Gretchen Peters, Tomorrow Morning

Baby you just slipped right through my fingers
Baby took the words out of my mouth
I could start all over but the thing is
You were never something I could live without

You were always looking for the silver lining
I was always waiting for the rain
Every now and then I need reminding
Love is never really love in vain

This night will end
This heart will mend
And I'll smile again
Tomorrow morning
As right as rain
As pure and plain
I will rise again
Tomorrow morning

If I have a soul I've never seen it
If I have a prayer why can't I pray
I say that I'm alright but I don't mean it
What I really mean is I'm okay

Chorus

I dreamed I was a sailor on the ocean
I dreamed that I was lost inside a storm
Maybe I can find a fair wind blowin
Somewhere in the dark before the dawn
