

Hans York, What If

(Hans York)

What if I had met you first,
Would you be my baby?
What if I had kissed your lips
Would that have changed my fate?
What if you were right for me
Would I turn back the wheel of time?

Two last sunny days in Rome,
I was out strolling on my own
No destination just a pleasure walk,
my friends already gone, nobody there to talk
Made a stop on my way,
everything felt different that day
A stranger, you were, caught my attention,
all things I saw there is a lot to mention

What if I had met you first,
Would you be my baby?
What if I had kissed your lips
Would that have changed my fate?
What if you were right for me
Would I turn back the wheel of time?

The beach was quite empty today,
just her and me and her friend from far away.
She hadn't seen her for the longest time,
now it became a problem of mine.
Wasn't looking for anything,
saw the confusion it would bring.
I love my girl, and it is true,
hidden behind I could see me and you

What if I had met you first,
Would you be my life mate?
What if I had kissed your lips
Would that have changed my fate?
What if you were right for me
Would I turn back the wheel of time?
What if I had met you first,
Would you be my life mate?
What if I had kissed your lips
Would that have changed my fate?
What if?
