

Honeydogs, Lost Again

There's time before the sun wakes up and grabs me
And drags me through another day
You think someone up there can't stand me
I guess I'm just vain
Where does it come from
You've got love
But not as much as you need
But you've lost again

There's a flame on a candle keeps burning Wind blowing can't put it out
No fire in my house concerns me
But a spark I can't live without
I hear the wedding band
Rub your name--Rub you name out on the sand
And you've lost again

I can't face it, I've wasted
Time away from you
I feel caged in
I'm changing 'cause of time away from you
And you, and you

Fall in love everynight with someone Like the dancer who said I was nice but wasn't never gonna call
I'd like to go home everynight with someone
But the pictures on the mantle, won't let me sleep at all

Another lonely heart club band well sometimes the ring is too small for my hand yeah, and you
Lost again
yeah, and you
Lost again
