

Hugh Cornwell, The Story of He and She

He wakes up every morning comes back with love just for her in her bed
It's something that she likes and she told him so that's what she said alright
She responds with a purr and a wink just to let him know that it ain't wasted on her
You know she appreciates it yes she sure appreciates
But when the sun is gone and the room is dark and cold
Then love can feel so old yeah
Just be on guard don't blacken your heart
That's the story of he and she That's the story of he and she
That's the story of he and she
That's the way love's supposed to be
And every day they do things for each other just to help life be a little easier
And it sure needs to be yes it sure enough needs to be
And every night they're glad that they got each other for another day
And why shouldn't it be that way
And why shouldn't it be that way
But if the rain is beating and the windows cry
Then love can wonder why
Just be on guard don't blacken your heart
Cos that's the story of he and she
That's the story of he and she
That's the story of he and she
That's the story of he and she That's the story of he and she
That's the way love's supposed to be