

Hurricane #1, Let Go Of The Dream

The streets I thought would once be mine now follow me home at the bus stop, join the line you've got to let go of the dream you wanted it all so young, so pay the price the tragedy is, you don't know what you're sacrificing and you've gotta let go of the dream understand what i mean?
it's a terrible scene
and when you're walking home will you remember what it was when you're walking home will you remember who i was when you get back home
will you remember that it was only rock and roll.
Success was just a finger's breadth away and now you wonder what you're going to do today but you've got to let go of the dream rehabilitation seems to be for once such as i, an impossibility so i'd better let go of the dream,
understand what i mean
it's a terrible scene
and when you're walking home
will you remember what it was
when you're walking home
will you remember who i was
when you get back home
will you remember that it was
only rock and roll.