

Ian Astbury, Devil's Mouth

take a razor to your hair burn the dress you hate to wear you don't have to cry no more you don't have to hide no more do you dream in colour? do you believe in others?
there's a devil in your mouth but and angel in your heart all the things that you have said they have torn this world apart ink a needle in your skin let the world know where you've been you don't have to cry no more you don't have to lie no more do you dream in colour? do you believe in others?
there's a devil in your mouth but and angel in your heart
all the things that you have said they have torn this world apart
there's a devil in your mouth but and angel in your heart all the things that you have said they have torn me apart there's a devil in your there's a devil in your there's an angel in your there's an angel in your
there's a devil in your mouth but and angel in your heart
all the things that you have said they have torn this world apart
there's a devil in your mouth but and angel in your heart
all the things that you have said they have torn my world apart