

Iona, Irish Day

About Columba, one of the first to bring the Gospel to the British Isles

Sand as white as snow swirls like smoke around my feet
And a sky that turns in a moment from blue to grey All these things I see
on an Irish day

It is here that time has granted
that the light
should still burn on
It was here a seed was planted
in the brave heart of an Irish son

Here before my time walked men of faith and truth
In a land that was dark they followed the way Bringing sweet light
on an Irish day

It is here that time has granted
in the brave heart of an Irish son

Here I kneel upon this ground Love can heal
when truth is found
