Jackson Browne, You've Forgotten

You've been passed around from hand to hand Cast upon the darkest sands Now you're so confused that you can hardly stand Forgotten, you've forgotten now you're on the run Forgotten, you've forgotten How to live beneath the sun How to live beneath the sun

Before you left I thought I knew That you would always need me too I never thought someday, that I'd be telling you You've forgotten, you've forgotten The things you used to feel

Forgotten, you've forgotten How to smile for real How to smile for real

And for the changes you have made Your beauty was the price you paid All your dreams rose up and then you watched them fade. You've forgotten, you've forgotten You've forgotten, you've forgotten The best is always yet to come The best is always yet to come The best is always yet to come And how to live beneath the sun