

Jean Shepard, I'm Alone

Staring through my window pane I watch the raindrops kiss the street below
My thoughts run like an endless road that never seems to lead to anyplace
I could have been in tangled web of yesterdays that never let me go
And my fingers traced the lines of hurt and loneliness has edged upon my face
And I'm alone I won't have you anymore
I'm finding out what the lonely is and how it hurts to love someone that's gone
For I'm alone

A drop of rain clings to the grass the way I used to hold you when we met
And ran away with all our dreams and takes the happiness we tried to find
And I remember oh so well everything I'm trying to forget
For an endless stream of memories race through the broken pieces of my mind
And I'm alone...
Yes I'm alone I'm so alone I'm so alone
