

Jean Shepard, Lonely Together

Everybody used to say we were perfect together but we're lonely together now
Once upon a time you and I were so in love
The whole wide world was gay and happy then
I don't know how or why our love began to die till it vanished like a straw in the wind
We're side by side but we're lonely together clinging to the pieces of a vow
Everybody used to say we were perfect together but we're lonely together now [steel]
It's a mighty big roof that we've nailed upon our house
For it stretches from your world to mine
Though it keeps out the rain what about the pain
And the tears that keep on falling all the time
We're side by side...
But we're lonely together now
