

Jen Foster, Superwoman

Well, I've centered my whole life around your every need
And I took you as you are, never tried to change a thing
And I never once complained
Because I love you

And I waited here at home while you went out with all your friends
Yeah, you had to have your space, I guess I never quite fit in
I was a little offbeat
And not on cue

Do you even see me standing here before you?
Do you even hear me or do I bore you?

Hey, I really feel kind of stupid, just trying to be everything to you but
But it does no good I could never be that cool yeah

Have I ever told you how I paint you in my mind?
But when I put the brush to canvas I find you hard to recognize
Cause you're looking straight at me
Right in my eyes

And suddenly I feel me reaching, trying to find the real you
And you smile and pacify me, and happily I play the fool
Is there something I can get you?
It's what I do

Are you hungry? Are you thirsty? Are you empty?
Is it getting cold in here or is it just me?

Hey, I really feel kind of stupid just trying to be everything to you but
But it does no good, I could never be that cool, yeah
And I am only now accepting I'm human, I cannot be Superwoman
Oh, it's so easy to love you, but it's hard to be that cool, yeah

I'm not Superwoman- I don't know how to fly
I'm not Superwoman- I gave it my best try
I'm not Superwoman- someday I'm gonna die
What a life...

Hey, I really feel kind of stupid just trying to be everything to you
But it does no good, I could never be that cool, yeah
And I am only now accepting I'm human, I cannot be Superwoman
Oh, it's so easy to love you, but it's hard to be that cool, yeah...
