

Jess Klein, Springtime

The old woman who lives in my head
Throws open the window and breathes in
The sun is exploding, the sky sparkles blue
Joy overwhelms her
Life is a boon

She says it is springtime now
It is springtime now
And the chill of my past rests behind me

The narcissus she planted last fall
She'd really forgotten, the snow and all
Oh, Mother Nature, you lifted the gloom
Then turned to remind us
Love renews
And it is springtime now
It is springtime now
And the chill of my past rests behind me

And I'm not alone
The sun is in the sky
The mother of creation never dies

Oh, I'm not alone
The sun is in the sky
And even when it sets, the moon will rise

High on a mountain, where I've never been That's where I'm going
Sheer strength of my chin
The glory of strength is not fast
But now that I know this
I deserve it at last

And it is springtime now
It is springtime now
Thank you my friends, thank you my family
