

Joe Nichols, No Time To Cry

My father died
A year ago today
The rooster started crowing
When they carried dad away
There beside my mother
In the livingroom i stood With my brother and my sister knowin'
Dad was gone for good Then I, I hung around just long enough To lay him in the ground
Then i caught a plane to do a show Up north in Detroit Town
Because I'm older now
And i ain't got not time to cry
I got no time to look back I got no time to see
The pieces of my heart that have been ripped away from me
And if the feelings start to come in I've learned to stop them fast
'Cause i don't know if i let em go they might not wanna pass
And there's just so many people Tryin' to get me on the phone And there's bills to pay and songs to play and a house to make a home
I guess i'm older now
And i ain't got no time to cry
I can still rmemeber Before I heard of Merle
So many things have changed
So much here in my world
I remember sitting on the front porch
When an ambulance drove by Listening to those sirens i would break down and cry now i'm walkin' and i'm talkin' doing just what i'm supposed to do working overtime to make sure i don't come unglued Because i'm older now...and i ain't got no time to cry
i sit down on the sofa and i watch the evening news there's a half-a-dozen tragedies from which to pick and choose the baby that was missing was found in a ditch today and there's bombs flying and people dying not so far away i'll take a beer from the fridgerator and sit in the yard with a cold one in my hand i'm gonna bit down and swallow hard Because i'm older now and i ain't got no time to cry
It's true
i'm older now just ain't got no time to cry no time to cry
no time to cry
