

Joe Purdy, San Jose

Mona, you know you wander on the street corner
I should have warned you
all of the boys
with all of their poison they'll rob you blind

and i knew your mother god rest her soul
where was your father?
Yeah well nobody knows i wish things were different the hand you were given it just don't seem fair and you play with what you're given you're doing fine

you try not to think about it well most of the time you just do what you have to
to make sure you get through yeah but sometimes it hurts singing Mona, you know you wander

on the street corner
I should have warned you
all of the boys
with all of their poison
as they make their way
yeah to San Jose

yeah well you're still so young yeah but you feel so old it's just that the things you've been through that are making you cold well I think you're gonna turn soon gotta careful with my moves just might lose you for good yeah and I can't fight your demons yeah cuz i'd have to fight you they're so far inside you and I just can't seem to get through and it ain't none of my business ain't none of my place yeah but i still had to try singing Mona, you know you gonna

on the street corner
I should have warned you
all of the boys
with all of their poison
as they make they're way
yeah to San Jose

oh now and i think i've lost you can't reach you no more cause you're high as a kite and i'm down here on the floor yah i'm begging you to come back down but you can't even hear that it's floated away
oh yeah it's such a shame cause i remember the days of the sunshine and rain yeah when we used to play on your mother's front lawn singing those old songs without a care in the world

oh i'm just singing Mona
you know you wander
on the street corner
I know you're gonna offer all of the boys and all of their poison
they make their way yeah to San Jose darling yeah to San Jose now

Yeah Mona
you know you're gonna
on the street corner...