

Joe Purdy, The Pretenders

Sally wake up you dont have to pretend anymore
Cuz while you were sleeping I drove us to someplace the weather will always be warm
We can go outside and bury our faces in the sun Theres no need to worry cuz no one will ask us where it is that we came from
We can walk on main street, dance in these honky tonk bars
No one will know who we are

You like the water so much that you could be a fish
We're right by the ocean so you can go dipping any old time that you wish
We'll watch the sunset, make love in the old lifeguard stand
When the setting is done, and we've lost the sun, we will nap on a blanket of sand
We can walk on water, dance in the light of the moon
Honey, just me and you

We'll wake to a restaurant with fancy napkins and plates
We watch the old man as he walks to the big white piano and sits down and plays the maitre'd calls me lucky as he pours our wine what a beautiful girl and i know in this world that the good ones are so hard to find
We can walk on red carpet, dance to our favorite songs
We can stay all night long

Sally wake up you dont have to pretend anymore
Cuz while you were sleeping I drove us to someplace the weather will always be warm
