Joshua Kadison, El Diablo Amor

EL DIABLO AMOR

Once upon a time In a little Spanish town There lived a girl who played guitar They came from all around

She sang of all their laughter She sang of all their pains She knew their lives And wove them into sweet guitar refrains

There were the songs she sang for lovers
There were the songs she sang for the souls departed
There were the songs she sang for dreamers
This is the song she sang for the broken hearted

El Diablo Amor El Diablo Amor That ol devil they call love Broke another heart again

El Diablo Amor El Diablo Amor That ol devil they call love Broke another heart again

The way she played the music The way she sang the tune In service to the sacred soul She was a mistress of the moon

There were the songs she sang for lovers
There were the songs she sang for the souls departed
There were the songs she sang for dreamers
This is the song she sang for the broken hearted

El Diablo Amor El Diablo Amor That ol devil they call love Broke another heart again

El Diablo Amor El Diablo Amor That ol devil they call love Broke another heart again

El Diablo Amor El Diablo Amor That ol devil they call love Broke another heart again

El Diablo Amor El Diablo Amor That ol devil they call love Broke another heart again