

Julia Marcell, Outer Space

You came here from outer space and there's nothing we have in common is this why we feel so trapped by the bounds which we have grown but you knew I think about stars yes you knew I think about what's out there you were curious so was I now we're haunted by the knowledge that we share
and all the little lights in life they're meant to show you where to go but if you turn them up too bright they'll blind you
there are some things that I just wouldn't like to know
you came here from outer space and that's the way I'd like to keep it eiderdown in each other's hands mud to hide each other's feet in but if you never say goodbye does it mean we'll never part and if you disappear suddenly does it mean that you won't leave the tiniest trace in my heart?
there are some things that I just
and if you are my pal
yes if you are my pal
let the moon do the magic is this how you turned so rich travelling the galaxy?
is this how you turned so sad learning things you never knew? is this how our story ends carrying this burden on our own? separated by the miles and years of light but could you look me in the eye aware but without much care and if we get to start all over again could you whisper in my ear there are the little lights in life they're meant to show you where to go
after all isn't this where you came from?
