

July For Kings, Believe

The day God closed her eyes
My mother says
She felt twenty angels
That came through the window and helped him to fly
My sisters wept and I stepped
Further from faith

The most beautiful sky turned to grey
But hey, the memories seem real
It's been years since I've prayed
Still insisting
That I don't want to feel
Like you feel

I set it all on fire
And watched the walls collapse
I stand alone and tired
Now I want it back
And even if everyone is a liar
I don't want to be
Within this silent choir

I want to believe
In something
I want to believe in something

When I close my eyes
Will they come for me
Will you not believe that I
I've learned how to fly
Will I still be singing
Somewhere in heaven

I wonder if angels can cry
I hope they come for me
I hope I see something
I hope that I
Walk into the white light
Walk into the white light

I set it all on fire
And watched the walls collapse
I stand alone and tired
Now I want it back
Even if everyone is a liar
I don't want to be
Within this silent choir

I want to believe
In something
In something

I want to believe
To believe in something
I said I

I set it all on fire
And watched the walls collapse
I stand alone and tired
Now I want it back
And even if everyone is a liar
I don't want to be
Within this silent choir

I want to believe
I want to believe in something
I want to believe in something
I want to believe in something
But God closed her eyes

I want to believe in something
I want to believe in something
I want to believe in something
But God closed her eyes

I want to believe in something
I want to believe in something
I want to believe in something
But God closed her eyes

We all want to believe in something
I want to believe
In something