

Jump Little Children, All Those Days Are Gone

All those days are gone
So she falls asleep every night just before dawn
And closes her eyes
As the sun starts to rise
'Cause all those days are gone

Sometimes she pretends
The sun it has finally begun to come to an end
Luminous nights
Of lonely streetlights
Sometimes she likes to pretend

She said that everybody wants to be here
Here where there's no one else around

Pull down all the shades
And try to forget how all of the memories fade
Memories that bled
A curtain bright red
Time to pull down the shades

She said that everybody wants to be here
Here where there's no one else around

All those days are gone

As far as the stars are away from the midday sun
Memories so bright
In a spinning twilight
But all those days are gone

She said everybody wants to be here
Here where there's no one else around

I'll trade the moon for the sun
But this feeling for no one
She said that everybody wants to be here

All those days are gone
As far as the stars are away from the midday sun
