

Kamelot, A Sailor's Hymn

can you hear the sirens resound? from the coastline of Ireland tonight it's the song of a promising heart of the souls that the ocean unite and she stands by the window alone staring into the rain
she is trying to guide his way home from the waters that keep them apart so she lights up a candle for hope to be found captive and blind by the darkness around firm as a mountain, she never will mourn timeless awaiting the break of dawn can you hear the sailor's hymn? as it comes with the rise of the tide it is sung where the rainbow begins as a comfort for tears she has cried she remains by the window alone
staring into the rain
she is trying to guide his way home
keeps on praying for god to protect him she lights up a candle for hope to be found captive and blind by the darkness around each wave a promise, a new hope reborn sunrise consoles at the break of dawn