Kamelot, Silence Of The Darkness

I don't dare to take it slowly, Cause time may pass me by. Restless like a newborn morning, I am hard to satisfy. Will you take me away?

In the silence of the darkness, I can't pretend I'm wide awake Afraid I could go under. In the silence of the darkness, I stumble for the light of day, But the journey never ends.

I can paint the world with flowers, Grown by heaven's gate. And reckless like a stormy ocean, I could cover them with hate. But it all sounds the same.

In the silence of the darkness, I can't pretend I'm wide awake, Afraid I could go under. In the silence of the darkness, I stumble for the light of day, But the journey never ends.

In the silence of the darkness, I can't pretend I'm wide awake, Afraid I could go under. In the silence of the darkness, I stumble for the light of day, But the journey never ends.