Kamelot, Wings Of Despair

sometimes my visions are distant and vague down at the base of the mountain once in a while I am weak and afraid tired and sick of it all I don't believe that my story is set nothing is destined or blatant bound to this body a world full of hate no one will heed if I fall no one can see it but you know that it's there guiding the steps of your soul holding the truth in the cross that you bear die with a heart that is bold fly on the wings of despair no one is holding you back the call on the wild is internal conquer the silence you fear tomorrow will not fade to black a new day is dawning remember no one's controlling your fate the questions are more than the answers I know that doesn't mean you are lonely searching for more consecutive goal's making it worth to go on no one can see it but you know that it's there guiding the steps of your soul holding the truth in the cross that you bear die with a heart that is bold fly on the wings of despair no one is holding you back the call of the wild is internal conquer the silence you fear tomorrow will not fade to black a new day is dawning remember no one's controlling your fate you, and you alone is forging the path leave your sorrows with the past never believe that the story is set nothing is destined or blatant bound to this body a world full of hate no one will heed if you fall