

Kendall Payne, Back To Normal

Such a lovely day to carry on your shoulders
It turned from blue to grey and you seem so much older
But its worth all the money in the world to find a way back to normal
If theres such a place
The doctor called your name and things became so sober
Supposed the price we'll pay will be worth it when its over
But it takes every effort to believe in the unseen when you see clearly
That things are not okay
Well I know you are frightened
Know you are angry
Know you tired of the unknown
I am beside you
I will remind you
You dont have to go it alone
Seems a tailor made sickness for your sins dear
If you planned your life away we never would be standing here
But with an impending bitter end
You have learned the lessons how
The sweet is in the now
Well I know you are frightened
Know you are angry
I know you tired of the unknown
But I am beside you
I will remind you
You dont have to go it alone
Alone, alone
We are not alone
Alone, alone
Never not alone hey
Alone, alone
Never not alone
There are no guarantees, no promise they can make us
Our faiths a fighting seed planted deep in desperate trust
I will take every moment I can get
And wont regret I share your name
To love is worth the pain