

Kevin Tellie, Last Devotion

So these could be the last words when all's gone
Mine could be the last song that has been played
I think I have ridden your horses everywhere on earth
You haven't returned anything
As I've seen you drown
I've seen you stranded

And the lights just disappear in my eyes
And everybody goes away
Man, nothing stays the same to me now
I think the lipstick melted
Nothing rearranges to me now
And I think I'll indulge in my last devotion

There's always something I regret in everything I do
But I think my cologne was contagious
So many minutes wasted in your eyes
So many times I've lied about surprise

And the lights just disappear in my eyes
And everybody goes away
Man, nothing stays the same to me now
I think the lipstick melted
Nothing rearranges to me now
And I think I'll indulge in my last devotion

If nothing what I said was real
Months seem under surreal
Chelsea told me she missed me
I don't believe any of that shit anymore
And I was drowning in Chelsea's sea
This is my last devotion

And the lights just disappear in my eyes
And everybody goes away
Man, nothing stays the same to me now
I think the lipstick melted
Nothing rearranges to me now
And I think I'll indulge in my last devotion