Kinky, Not Afraid

They say dreams enter from the feet, so they recommed bare feet to sleep If you wants Morpheus* with you

They say the trees wear their clothes backwards: In the summer the wear leaf coats and in the winter they take them off.

I'm not afraid of the world, I'm not afraid to rollercoster.

They say comets are like animals with large and bright tails and they gallop through the night. They say rugs are just floors with over grown hair and the broom is the comb, the vacum is the Blow-dryer

I sleep and dream well, bare feet during night I'm a good rider of the comets light but even though i believe. I'm a tree i can't stand outside naked with the breeze

*The greek god of dreams - El dios griego de los suenos