

Kirsty McGee, Spider Lullaby

"won't you come a little closer?" said the spider to the fly "where i weave my webs of wonder in the eaves under the sky and i'll wrap you in soft cotton and caress you as you lie and as the night draws in i'll sing a spider lullaby...

in my web, like a cathedral shall i honour you, my love where the raindrops hang like diamonds i will hold you soon enough in the gold and silver threadwork you can look into my eyes and as the night turns blue i'll sing you spider lullabies and i wonder as i hold you how we are come to this that i should wound you as i love you i should kill you with a kiss and i'll wrap you in soft cotton - see how soft and still you lie and i'll sing to you my darling this spider lullaby..."
