

Lenna Kuurmaa, Still Waters Run Deep

Far I see but never in front of me
I look over the walls
I see a random kill, back-stabbing still
I see the world with one eye closed
Since all my dreams are touched by an evil-hand
How should I ever sleep
when I'm caught so short, overdriven thoughts
Still waters do run deep
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
We are the light, we are the night, never invited
Drive alone, we cry alone, never rewarded
Holding the world inside our hands we keep on walking
They help me up to see me drown.
Poisoned tale, so fretful within the pale
Show me the naked truth
Cause I'm caught so short with overdriven thought
Still waters do run deep
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Under the right light, it won't hurt my sight
Save one wish
With open eyes I see the world
Save my only wish
Still waters run deep
