

Lloyd Cole, Man Enough

now that the low life has no meaning
'cause you've been there, now you're gone but your heart won't keep from cheating it's stringing you along stranger to me, well what's the lowdown are you man enough to pray for a better way of living i believe i've lost my way oh may, could you please hold me i believe i might fall

i believe that i might fall could there be a better way of living better than the easy way could the wretched be forgiven

are you man enough to pray

wore my heart upon my sleeve to court the wretched and the free but if by chance i'd lost my way would you help me find it babe

oh may, could you please hold me
i believe that i might fall
i believe i might fall

now that the low life has no meaning
'cause you've been there, now you're gone
but your heart won't keep from cheating
it's stringing you along

wore my heart upon my sleeve
to court the wretched and the free
but if by chance i'd lost my way
would you help me find it babe

oh may, could you please hold me
i believe that i might fall
i believe that i might fall

wore my heart upon my sleeve
to court the wretched and the free
but if by chance i'd lost my way
am i man enough to pray
am i man enough to pray
are you man enough to pray
are you man enough to pray