

Louis XIV, Stalker

I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice
Still I can't seem to look at you
I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice

Put on gloves
The watch going
The phone rings off
In the car lurking
See me through the window and
You lay down on your bed

I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice
Still I can't seem to look at you
I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice
(If I'm getting to you)

'Cause I'm loose slide
A knife through
Back door locked bolt through
Sleeping softly, holding pillows
Tightly in your arms
I sneak up without a sound
Down the hall to your bedroom
Twist the knob stand above you
As you lay there in your bed

I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice
Still I can't seem to look at you
I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice

I took off all your clothes
See all your face
Until the pillow slightly saw you
Or
Into the pillow slightly silent?
As you breathe gasping holding air tight like it's your last
Put my hand on your mouth
Feel your lips on my fingers
Smell your sweat
You're looking lovely my possession

Again. Shadows up
The watch going
Phone rings off
Car lurking
See me through the window and
You lay down on your bed

I can stare at you all night and you won't even notice
