

Lucy Kaplansky, Just You Tonight

It's not the altitude
That takes my breath away
And makes my body think the air's too thin
It's not the bourbon, you've been drinking
That burns like autumn leaves against my skin

It's just you, you tonight
And the music you heard in me somehow
It's just you tonight
And I swear to you I'm listening now

It's not a fable
That give meaning
To the language my heart speaks to you
It's not road map
That tells me I've come home
Lying here in the quiet next to you

It's just you, you tonight
And the music you heard in me somehow
It's just you tonight
And I swear to you I'm listening now

When you whisper my name
It's like I can hear
All these melodies I used to know
I remember them from long ago

It's just you, you tonight
And the music you heard in me somehow
It's just you tonight
And I swear to you I'm listening now

I'm listening now

I'm listening now

I'm listening now

I'm listening now
