Mae, Release Me

I heard the old man say we need the rain And I can feel it in my bones they're aching I watched the sky and wait and wish these waters ease my pain Because my will is breaking

If you'd get next to me and help me find simplicity Then you could be the one to take me, to break me And flood my soul

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me) Waiting for your love Oh to free me, so release me

Grey clouds, they infiltrate as every move you make Gets me closer to clarity While droplet drummers lead a complex beat increasing speed Somehow accompanies our intensities

At first this cloud burst is pulling us under Lightning and thunder Rain falls and you take me under And flood my soul

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me) Waiting for your love Oh to free me, so release me

So take off your shoes and stay a while This might be the right time tonight If it makes you feel good Then it makes me feel alright

We should take down the curtains now and make blankets here on the floor
The torrential downpour, the potential for more
A cease to fight this tension that ignites us here in the dark
'Cause tension causes friction and this friction leaves two sparks
The rain has filled this cup and before it overflows
I wanna take you in now
Here it goes

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me) Waiting for your love oh to free me, so release me

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me) We have just begun You release me, oh release me
