

Magazine, The Book

This man is at the door of Hell...somehow it seems to be his destination after a life of subtle stubbornness.

To all accounts, the kindly old man who is the doorman (and who conceivably reminds him of his father).

It all happens quite quickly...he finds that he's made a decision and is already holding the old man's book.

Next thing he knows, they have exchanged opinions on the book and he has handed it back to the doorman.
